Prelude: J. S. Bach (1685-1750): 'Jesus Joy of Man's Desiring' BWV 147

Postlude: J. S. Bach (1685-1750): Fugue in E Flat Major, BWV 552

One of Bach's most played pieces, the chorale 'Jesus Joy of Man's Desiring' appears in the 147th cantata, today heard as an organ transcription. A gentle, melody conveys the overflowing joy of divine presence in one's life, inviting a confession of faith: 'Jesus is mine, what shall I fear?'

The Fugue in E Flat major is a monumental worship of Trinity, the last part of a whole collection including a Prelude and few choral preludes. There are many elements in the music directing our attention to the 'God in three persons, blessed Trinity' including the presence of 3 flats at the key, the structure in 3 parts, the use of 3 themes which are masterfully combined during the last magnificent statement. This music remains one of the most satisfying for listener and player alike.
